

MAKE SOMEONE'S DAY

Earlier this year, I was doing an opening message for church camp. My talk was about making someone's day. We don't wake up in the morning saying we are going to make someone's day. Nor do we know if someone is going to make our day. It is not a "planned" thing. You know...it just happens. And we can not plan to make someone's day because we won't know it happened unless that person tells us that we made their day. And we won't know that someone made our day until it happens.

This recently happened to me. A person who I have not been able to talk to for quite some time allowed me to visit. They shared their home, and what's been happening to them. The entire time, I held back tears. My heart was so full. At the end of our visit, I told them that we don't wake up making someone's day or having someone make ours. "But right now, you just made my day", as the tears started to roll down my cheeks. " No, really, you have no idea how much you just made my day!!" "Thank you!!"

There is a feeling that is indescribable when that happens.

Because...it was such a surprise and it came from out of nowhere. It makes your heart full.

So to all who read this...go and MAKE SOMEONE'S DAY!
